

Inclusion

Responding to Contemporary Canadian Stakeholders

Northwest Territories and Nunavut, Yellowknife

Getting Organized

Change seats.

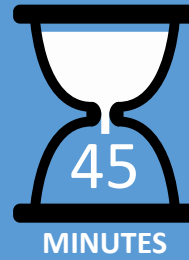

Move to the table number shown on your name tag.

Introduce yourselves.

Name, jurisdiction, position and tenure.

Identify a reporter

This person will report on the discussion to the entire delegation at the end of the session.

Discussion Time

Share.

Ensure that everyone at the table has time to share their experiences. You will have 45 minutes for the group discussion.

Reporting Out

Report.

The reporter will report out to the entire delegation, summarizing any themes, common issues and solutions or advice for national colleagues.

You have just listened to Michael Bach's message of why and how your Board and organization must embrace diversity and inclusion. At this round table, there is a mix of governors from across the country. Although all facing unique challenges, when it comes to stakeholder relations, there is much in common and much to learn from one another. You are asked to share how your Board is responding to the contemporary needs of your stakeholders with a particular emphasis on efforts to embed diversity and inclusion in outreach and engagement.

In your discussions, you may consider:

- What new needs and expectations are you seeing from your stakeholders?
- What engagement strategies are being utilized to reach the broadest base of stakeholders?
- Have you added new communication vehicles to ensure openness, transparency and ongoing dialogue?
- How do you integrate diverse stakeholder feedback into your corporate strategies?
- How do you measure the effectiveness of your communication and engagement strategies and plans?
- Does the composition of your Board represent the diversity of the stakeholders it serves?

